Chinese said more secure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance is telling President Carter that Chinese leaders are confident, secure in their power and more relaxed than past visitors have found them, says a knowledgeable administration official.

"What comes back from China reinforces the feeling we had at the outset — that this is a very propitious time for renewed contact at the highest level," said the official. But he said there are no plans for Carter to follow Vance to Peking in the near future.

The informant, who declined to be identified, gave an assessment of Vance's report to Carter late Sunday on his four-day visit to Peking last week.

Full diplomatic recognition of Peking's communist government remains at the end of "a long road," the source said.

"It's an ultimate goal," the official said, "but results may not be immediately apparent."

In a statement issued by the White House, Vance and the President said they anticipated "additional constructive meetings ... (with the Chinese) in the weeks and months ahead."

The statement gave no hint of when these meetings will be or which officials will participate. It said Carter and Vance found the secretary's trip "a good beginning" toward recognizing Peking, but added that "it would be premature ... to draw firm conclusions."

Vance's briefing for the President in the Cabinet Room at the White House was attended by Vice President Walter F. Mondale, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and Zbigniew Brzezinski, the President's national security assistant.

In addition to U.S. relations with China and Japan, they spent three hours talking about Southern Africa, the Middle East, Carter's new Panama Canal treaty, U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation talks and negotiations for a nuclear test ban.

The administration official declined to provide details on those discussions.

But the official said of Vance's report on China:

"The Peking leadership is confident and it projects a feeling of security, indeed of a situation in general which one could describe as more relaxed than what people who have been there in the past have sensed."

The informant said Vance's trip gave him "an opportunity to explain to the Chinese our policies and courses of action and analyses of a number of very important areas of the world."

"From those discussions, the Chinese obtained a much clearer understanding, and in some specific cases I think the results of the discussions left them with an increased degree of assurance to the extent they are interested in our ability, both in terms of capability and of will, to act decisively around the world in global matters."

County sets levy again at 48 cents

The County Court Monday morning set the 1977 county tax levy at 48 cents per $100 valuation and approved changes within the sheriff's department and its budget, necessitated by the recent sheriff's election.

The county budget for 1977 was set at the beginning of the year with the general revenue tax income figured on a 50-cent levy, which would have generated $610,395.98 for the county's coffers.

However, county expenditures for the year have not exceeded anticipated amounts and the court was able to maintain the 48-cent levy, also the levy for 1976, and still meet expenses, it was explained. The 48-cent levy will generate $584,874 for the county. State law limits the levy to 50 cents per $100 valuation without an election.

Sheriff-elect Don Stratton, who will be officially sworn into office at 8:30 a.m. Thursday along with Jack McMurdo, a Democrat, who defeated Republican Bill McCune in November for the office of county assessor, appeared before the County Court to request changes in his budget.

The court unanimously approved the changes requested by Stratton, which will result in changes in duties for several members of the department and their salaries but will not change the department's overall budget.

Stratton named Jim Lawson, who opposed Stratton for the Democratic nomination to succeed former Sheriff Emmett Fairfax, as his chief deputy.

Other changes, effective Sept. 1, include naming Deputy Jim Cave as his criminal investigation deputy and moving jailer Jack Comer up to road deputy. Brett Shirky, currently a records deputy and court bailiff in the sheriff's office in the courthouse, will replace Comer as jailer. Linda Lefevers, the other records clerk and court bailiff, will assume Shirky's duties, as well as her current duties.

Orval Lewis, process server for the department for the past 11 years, will retire Sept. 1, Stratton announced. Ron Welge, a Sedalia police officer for the past nine months and a resident of Pettis County for several years, will assume Lewis' duties and will serve civil papers

Six tons of fury... Barbara on the loose

Elephant rips home for elderly

SAUK CITY, Wis. (AP) — Seventy-one-year-old Tillie Nolden was having lunch in bed when she saw Barbara breeze by.

"I thought I was surely going mad," she said. "Did I really see an elephant?"

She did.

And so did many of the 90 other residents of the Maplewood Nursing Home, most of them 75 or older.

"Nothing much ever happens around here, but this was real excitement," said nurse Marjorie Krause.

It all began when six-ton Barbara, who created a sensation in Fond du Lac on Aug. 8 when she ran loose for several hours, bolted as she and other elephants helped raise the main tent at the Carson & Barnes Circus for a one-night stand Sunday at this central Wisconsin community.

Despite chain shackles on her forelegs, Barbara, 38, which is late middle-age for an elephant, outdistanced dozens of pursuing spectators who had been watching the tent raising.

"Everyone was chasing her. It made it worse," circus manager D. R. Miller said.

Barbara roamed four miles to Maplewood. There, she crashed through a four-foot-high plate glass window and the surrounding wall into an elderly woman's room.

Luckily, the woman wasn't in the room.

"She's usually right in front of that window, but it was lunchtime so the rooms and the halls were empty," said Mrs. Krause.

The 10-foot-tall Barbara wasn't content to stay put in the room. She smashed out of it, through a door and into the ahl. Tiles and light fixtures from the nine-foot ceiling went with her.

Then she raced down a hall past nurses who were so astonished they "couldn't say anything," Mrs. Krause said.

Barbara left the same way she came in — smashing.

She went through a hall door and paused in a nearby field.

Behind her was what Mrs. Krause estimated to be "at least" several thousand dollars damage.

Sauk City policeman Roger Moon said authorities caught up with Barbara in the field and coaxed her into a truck with the help of one of the circus' other elephants.

"We're all making light of it now and joking about it," said Mrs. Krause, "but it was a miracle no one was hurt."

Four held in plot to lift Elvis' body

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Four men who police say were plotting to steal Elvis Presley's body and hold it for ransom were arrested early today outside the cemetery where the rock 'n' roll singer is entombed.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal reported that the men were carrying explosives with which they planned to blast open the mausoleum containing the body. But Police Director E. Winslow Chapman dismissed reports of explosives.

Lt. S.T. McCochren of the homicide squad said in a statement that police had received confidential information several days ago that a group of persons planned to break into Presley's mausoleum at Forest Hills cemetery, take the body and hold it for ransom.

Officers from the department's tactical unit staked out the suburban Memphis graveyard. On Saturday, McCochren said, suspects were seen in the area, apparently making a trial run.

Chapman said that early this morning three men entered the cemetery over a back wall and made their way toward the white marble mausoleum where Presley is entombed. He said the men apparently became suspicious and turned to leave. They were then arrested.

The fourth man, who police said was at the wheel of a getaway car, was arrested after a short chase.

No charges had been filed against the men by mid-morning, and police refused to identify them.

Deputy Chief John Molnar said earlier the men were arrested for investigation of attempted burglary.

Police said as far as they know no extortion threat was made.

"There were no explosives found," Chapman said this morning. "The only place I've heard reports of explosives is in the media. I don't know where they got that information."

Chapman said police suspect the men intended to use conventional burglary tools to break into the mausoleum, but he said no such tools were found in the men's car.

"We are searching the grounds around the cemetery for tools," he said. Chapman said police were checking to see whether the fleeing driver might have thrown tools away.

The homicide department is handling the case because the investigation has to do with the attempted removal of a body, McCochren said.

Presley was entombed Aug. 18, two days after he died at age 42 of a heart attack at his home, Graceland Mansion.

U.S., British envoys confer with Vorster

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Ambassador Andrew Young and British Foreign Secretary David Owen met for four hours this morning with Prime Minister John Vorster in their search for a peaceful settlement in Rhodesia, then scheduled another session for later today.

A British spokesman also said the two envoys' scheduled departure for Kenya Tuesday might be delayed.

Observers here took the announcement of a second round of talks and possible delayed departure as an indication the talks were not going smoothly.

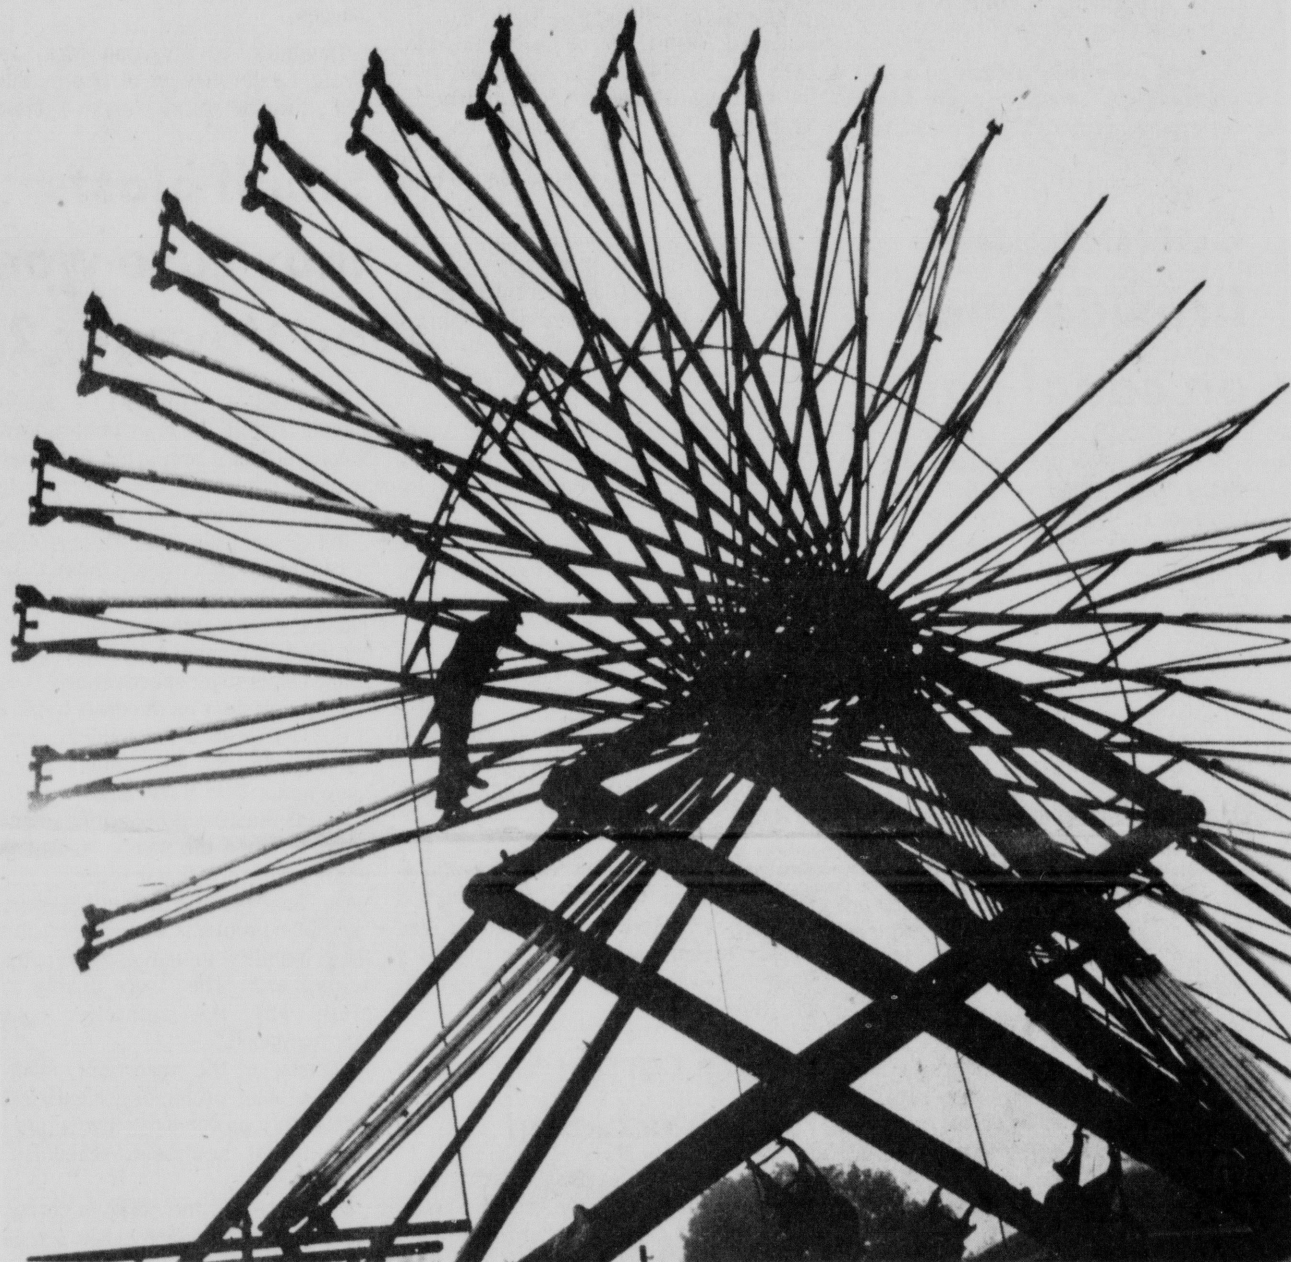

Owen and Young, the American U.N. ambassador, were trying to enlist Vorster's help in getting Rhodesian

Prime Minister Ian Smith to accept the new British-American plan to bring black rule to the breakaway British colony.

A negative editorial in the government-owned Zambia Daily Mail newspaper of Lusaka further underlined the difficulties faced by the two on their current mediation mission.

The newspaper said that because of the opposition of black African leaders "it cannot be said the present settlement proposals do have much chance of success."

Zambia is an important supporter of the black guerrilla movement in Rhodesia.

Foggy finale

A Murphy Brothers Exposition employe climbed a large ride to dismantle it early Monday morning as the sun broke through the heavy fog that covered the State Fairgrounds. The 1977 Fair closed Sunday. Rainy weather dropped attendance to only 14,985 for the day, Fair officials reported.

Fair falls 8,100 short of matching 1976 total

A total of 307,427 persons attended the Show-Me Showcase during a 10-day run that ended Sunday night. This figure is 8,126 down from last year's total attendance of 315,553 persons, Fair Director Jerry Hermann said Monday.

Saturday's attendance figure of 45,004 was the second-largest of the Fair and Sunday's attendance figure was low at 14,985.

Hermann attributed the attendance decline in part to the Helen Reddy grandstand shows, which attracted only 4,203 Fairgoers on opening night Aug. 19.

"This was certainly a disappointing draw," Hermann said. "Just not enough people showed up."

Overall, however, Hermann said he was pleased with the 75th annual Fair, noting that "an awful lot of people did come down to see the Fair and had a good time. That's what we always strive for." In addition to reflecting on the past 10 days, Hermann already was thinking ahead to next year.

"We've got to improve the flow of traffic," he said. "We're going to have to study this situation closely but we want to make it better." No specific plans have been made yet, but the problem will be reviewed in coming months, he added.

Over the weekend, two persons on the Fairgrounds were taken to Bothwell Hospital. Ken Williams, who with his wife, Ruby, has operated a food stand on the Fairgrounds for 51 years, was taken to the hospital in a State Fair Fire Department ambulance suffering from an apparent heart attack. Paramedic Jim Weber, Liberty, a member of the Fair ambulance crew Saturday, received permission from the hospital to administer life-saving drugs to Williams on the way to the hospital. Bothwell Hospital sources reported Monday morning Williams had been dismissed.

John Penning, an employee of Murphy Brothers Exposition, Inc., which operates the Fair carnival, received severe injuries when he fell from the top of the carnival entrance sign while working on it about 4:30 a.m. Sunday. Penning suffered a broken back and two broken ankles in the fall. He was reported to be in good condition Monday morning at Bothwell Hospital.

Monday morning, while last-minute facts and figures were being wrapped-up across the Fairgrounds, Murphy Brothers workmen were taking down Tiltawhirls, Ferris Wheels and other rides and stands. The equipment was loaded on trucks and diesel rigs that lumbered out of Sedalia Monday morning.

Doing her share to close out the Fair was Sharon Fricke, a University of Missouri Extension Division worker from Saline County. She was rounding up all the exhibits in the 4-H Building submitted by Saline County youths who started to school Monday. Instead of 4-H's from across the state converging on the Fairgrounds Monday, Extension workers from various counties in the state took all the exhibits shown by their respective 4-H's for later distribution back home.

In various judging events, the junior champion polled Hereford bull was shown by Karen Hawkins, Norborne, and the reserve junior champion by Tom Biglieni, Republic. Darrell Creason, Polo, showed the senior champion and grand champion bull. Jimmy Butler, Republic, showed the reserve senior champion bull and Miss Hawkins the reserve grand champion bull.

In 4-H polled Hereford judging, Kelly Kisse, Springfield, showed the junior champion female and James Powell, Reeds, the reserve junior champion female. The champion female of breed was shown by Earlene Dean, Raymore, and the reserve champion female of breed by Miss Kisse. Miss Kisse also showed the junior champion, with Jeffrey Viebrock, Springfield, displaying the senior reserve champion.

In 4-H Charolais competition, the junior champion female was shown by Reggie Household, Martinsburg, and the reserve junior champion female by Martin Ahrens, Martinsburg. The champion female of breed was shown by Julie

Canoeist says no to repeat

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — It took Stan Sroka more than eight months of paddling to cross the United States in a canoe via 22 different rivers. Would he do it again? "Never," said the 24-year-old Springfield, Mass., canoeist. He tied up his once-yellow canoe in Portland Saturday. Only a remnant of a "Massachusetts to Oregon" sign showed on its side. Sroka began his 5,000-mile transcontinental voyage in April 1976 on the Connecticut River in Massachusetts. While traveling, he paddled a little each day regardless of the weather and usually spent the night on the river bank. Sroka interrupted his journey when winter settled in on the upper Missouri last fall and then returned in April to finish the voyage. Moving from the headwaters of one river system to another required numerous portages of his 19-foot canoe and more than 200 pounds of gear. He said he usually managed to hitch a ride for himself and his craft from drivers on nearby roads. Part of the way he had a partner. He was sick twice. Once in Ohio from poison ivy, and in Idaho. "You can't drink the Snake River even with iodine in it," said the dysentery victim. Asked if he ever felt like giving up, he said: "At least once every day. Usually it was in the morning while raking the frost off everything...knowing the pain that would come from paddling all day. "I've seen a United States and its changes from east to west, its magnificent scenery in a way few others have ever done. "But I won't do it again."

Local schools prepare to receive '77 students

It's back-to-school time again as Sacred Heart School started classes Monday morning, with local public schools and the St. Paul Lutheran School to do so Wednesday. All public school teachers, counselors and administrators met Monday morning at the Junior High School for a general orientation session. Teachers will meet with principals of their respective schools Monday afternoon and Tuesday. Superintendent of Schools Kem Keithly said total school enrollment is tentatively projected to be around 4,750. Actual first-day figures will be released later this week, he said. For the first and what is expected to be the only time, local sixth graders will attend classes at the Broadway Presbyterian Church. Next year, sixth-graders are expected to attend classes in the Sedalia Middle School. The middle school will be created by the expansion of the present Junior High School building on South Ingram. Sacred Heart principal Bob Emo said Monday 234 students are enrolled in kindergarten through eighth grade and 137 are enrolled in the high school. The elementary figure, Emo said, is about five per cent above last year and the high school enrollment is about 10 per cent higher than last year. It was tentatively estimated that 124 students will attend classes in pre-kindergarten through grade six at St. Paul's School.

in the county as well as the city. Although these changes will leave the department with one less person than before, Stratton noted he will have the same number of field deputies as Fairfax had. The naming of Cave as criminal investigation officer is only one of several improvements within the department Stratton said he plans to implement. A federal grant, costing the county only 10 per cent of the total salary, is currently available for a night jailer, Stratton said, and would fall within the department's current budget. There is also enough in the budget to hire an additional road deputy for the remainder of the year, Stratton explained. However, the budget does not include enough for clothing or mileage allowances for another deputy, he said, indicating another road deputy probably will not be hired unless funds are included in the department's 1978 budget.

Carter nears final decision on wheat curb

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is near a final decision on whether to curb the nation's 1978 wheat crop. The announcement is expected at a White House briefing today. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland recommended that farmers be required to reduce wheat plantings in order to qualify for federal price supports and other benefits. A wheat acreage set-aside for 1978 would be the first time in five years that farmers have been required to reduce plantings. The set-aside plan in 1973 idled about 7.4 million acres and farmers were paid $478.3 million for taking their land from production. Bergland wants wheat production reduced to help stem a decline in wheat prices and to head off further large gains in the U.S. wheat surplus. The proposal by Bergland was that farmers be required to set aside land equal to 25 per cent of their projected 1978 wheat acreage. Other Agriculture Department officials indicated this might involve around 15 million acres being idled. The administration has been pressured recently to make a decision on 1978 wheat production because farmers are ready to plant winter wheat which will be harvested next summer. It makes up about three-fourths of the total U.S. wheat production. But some authorities, reportedly including a few in the administration, have opposed the set-aside plan, partly on grounds that poor weather in the coming year might trigger another big drain on grain reserves at a time when production is being reduced.

Carter plans fireside chat on canal pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, stepping up its task-force drive for ratification of the new Panama Canal treaty, says opponent Ronald Reagan has raised debate to "a more productive level" by focusing on alternatives to the treaty now in force. Carter predicts the Senate will ratify his treaty and says he will use a fireside chat to take his campaign for the pact to the American people. He said the consequences would be very severe if the treaty is rejected. Announcement of the fireside chat came as Hamilton Jordan, the President's top political aide, mounted an all-out drive for ratification. Jordan put assistant Joe Aragon to work on the effort and enlisted help from virtually every sector. Jordan heads a task force to win the 67 Senate votes needed for approval. Political and business leaders who have helped Carter efforts in the past are being summoned to briefings and dispatched back to states with wavering senators. White House officials see Reagan's call for "alternative courses of action" that would "recognize the aspirations of the Panamanian people" as an end to his demand that the United States' present treaty with Panama be maintained intact. "Even Gov. Reagan is saying the status quo is not a real alternative," one administration official said Sunday. "That leaves the question: Are we better off ratifying our new treaty or tearing up the past 13 years of negotiating and starting the process anew?" The official, who declined to be identified, said he was reporting the views of Carter and his top foreign policy advisers. "Reagan has elevated the debate to a higher and more productive level," the official said. "Now we'll deliberate alternatives to the terms in the treaty. It won't be a matter of dreams, like keeping the status quo, versus reality, which says we can't."

Actually, there are two new agreements, one to yield control of the canal in the year 2000, and the other to guarantee the permanent neutrality of the waterway along with the right of the United States to keep it open and secure. The agreements are to be signed here Sept. 7, before the Senate takes up the pact. The signing ceremony, designed to whip up enthusiasm, will be attended by the presidents of South American countries including Chile, Argentina and the Dominican Republic as well as the vice president of Brazil. Most public opinion polls reflect voter opposition to the treaty. The White House is waiting for a poll of its own to use in its efforts.

Two persons from area die in accidents

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS The deaths of two persons in two-car collision in northeast Missouri Sunday evening brought the weekend traffic toll in the state to at least 10 persons. The Missouri Highway Patrol identified the victims as the driver of one car, Leora A. Wolfe, 64, and her passenger, Mary L. Kremer, 58, both of Marceline. The patrol said the head-on collision occurred on U. S. 24, about three miles east of Salisbury. Grace Foster, 78, of California, Mo., was killed in a four-vehicle collision four miles west of her hometown when a tractor-trailer unit skidded on wet pavement on a curve of U. S. 50 and hit her car head-on. The vehicle behind hers plowed into the wreckage as the tractor trailer unit spun around, returned to its own lane and struck another car. Leland Hensley, 30, Warrensburg died Sunday when his car went out of control on a curve of Missouri 13 one mile north of U. S. 50 in Johnson County and hit a utility pole. Helen Brown, 80, Rich Hill, died Saturday evening when her car collided with a tractor-trailer rig on U. S. 50 at the eastern edge of Kansas City. Darrell Stephens, 19, St. Louis, was killed Saturday in a motorcycle accident on Interstate 44 in the St. Louis suburb of Sunset Hills. Larry Willhite, 16, Plato, died in a motorcycle accident near Sedalia Saturday. Glenn A. Adam, 20, Arnold, was killed Saturday when he was struck by a car as he walked along Missouri 21 in southern St. Louis County. Mary Alice Woods, 44, Columbia, died Saturday morning in a two-car collision on U. S. 44 near Kingdom City. Martin F. Meeker, 39, Osgood, died Friday evening when his car ran off a steep gravel road in north-central Missouri.

Police corporal hurt in accident

Sedalia Police Cpl. Ron Hoskins suffered minor back injuries and was treated and released at Bothwell Hospital early Sunday morning following an accident in which a car apparently tried to hit the motorcycle Hoskins was operating. Also treated and released was a passenger on the motorcycle, Michelle Donath, 26, 240 South Quincy. She suffered abrasions on the hand. Police reported that Hoskins was riding east on Broadway at Quincy about midnight Saturday, when an unknown car turned from the outside eastbound lane into the motorcycle's path. In order to avoid a collision, Hoskins deliberately put the motorcycle into a side slide for about 96 feet. The car left the scene.

Small blasts may cure woes on Voyager 2

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists having troubles with a stubborn Voyager 2 computer are preparing for a new attempt to put scientific equipment aboard the Jupiter-bound space vehicle to work. Jet Propulsion Laboratory officials here planned to try again today to set off small explosions intended to snap into place the data-gathering boom that has troubled Voyager 2 and delayed the launch of its sister space probe. The explosions on the craft would blow a dust cover off a mechanical arm that carries scientific instruments, said JPL spokesman Don Bane. Mission officials hope the blasts will help provide enough force to move the pesky 7½-foot boom one degree and lock it in place. On Sunday, the scientists reported computer problems were responsible for their inability to move the Voyager 2 science arm. They were unable to explain why the computer system malfunctioned. Because of the uncertainty over the space probe's problems, scientists have indefinitely postponed a trajectory correction that had been scheduled for Sunday. But Bane said the delay in correcting the course should not cause problems, because the adjustment is minor. "All it needs is a little tweak," said Bane. In Cape Canaveral, Fla., space agency officials say they may be able to launch Voyager 1 on Sept. 5 or 6. The scheduled Sept. 3 launch was delayed Saturday night so that extra springs could be installed in the booms that malfunctioned on Voyager 2. Voyager 2, which took off Aug. 20, and Voyager 1 are designed to take pictures and measure temperatures, radiation and atmospheres of Saturn, Jupiter and possibly Uranus, before hurtling out of the solar system.

Fans do all the talking when Waylon performs

By DAN POTTER
Staff Writer

The man billed as the nation's "No. 1 Outlaw" pulled into town Saturday night. But Waylon Jennings does not top the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List. He is, along with Willie Nelson and a few others, a leader of what is called a new movement in country music.

Whether it's called "progressive rock" or "outlaw blues," it's a happening that seems to be attracting an audience not drawn to country music before — the young 20s set.

Most of the 17,776 people who paid $3, $4 or $5 to see Jennings perform at the Fairgrounds Saturday night were under 30 years of age.

Some looked like they walked right out of the hard rock movement of the 60s. But others looked as if they had just bleached a new pair of Levis to the preferred fade and were having trouble deciding just how to position the newly bought cowboy hat on their semi-longish head of hair.

You can bet many would be back in their business suit and wingtips the next day and at the Jaycees meeting next week.

And the outlaw had a horde of Highway Patrol troopers and Fair security people surrounding him Saturday evening. They were not there to arrest him, as Drug Enforcement Administration agents had last week in Nashville, but to protect him from overzealous fans.

Jennings' agent, Bill Conrad, told The Democrat-Capital that the charge of conspiracy to possess 23 grams of cocaine filed against Jennings and his secretary last Tuesday was not the best kind of publicity. But looking around at the packed grandstands, he reasoned, "It hasn't seemed to hurt him either."

While the outlaw's band was setting up for the second show, Conrad continued with talk about the drug charge.

"The general consensus is that it will be thrown out of court Wednesday. To a certain extent it seems to be a second chance to get at Willie Nelson," he replied.

Nelson and Jennings are good friends and Nelson has been questioned by a grand jury in recent months about illegal narcotics. Nelson has reasoned that the whole controversy started when a country magazine columnist called him "Cocaine Willie." That was a guilt by association incident, according to statements by Nelson.

One factor causing many people to refer to Jennings and Nelson as outlaws is due to their refusal to appear at this year's Country Music Association award ceremonies. Jennings has been nominated for four CMA awards, one being the award for top single with his latest smash, "Lukensbach Texas."

Another reason is Jennings' reclusive attitude toward reporters. Jennings and his wife, Jessi Colter, who sang before his performances Saturday night, have outlawed interviews with any reporters these days — unless certain guidelines are agreed to beforehand.

According to a story by Rolling Stone writer Charles M. Young, Jennings and his wife will not give interviews "Unless the interviewer agrees to the terms of a contract which gives the subject — i.e., Jennings and Colter — the right to approve the manuscript before it is submitted for publication. The pair also demands the right to approve or reject any photographs which are taken of them for publication," according to Young's story.

And sure enough, The Democrat-Capital found those requirements to be in force Saturday night.

Earlier in the day one of the paper's reporters had asked the Fair's public information officer Scott Clark for a press pass to cover the backstage area during the concert. That did not seem to be an unusual request because reporters had been given access to the backstage for all other performances this year.

Waylon Jennings

"You can't have one," Clark replied. "These people are paranoid. They issue their own passes for the backstage and I have four," he said. "One is for the governor, one is for me and one is for the secretary of agriculture in case either wants to go backstage," explained Clark, not saying who would get the coveted fourth pass.

"These people are so paranoid they are even going to change the color of the passes between the 6 and 9 p.m. shows," Clark continued.

But things did not turn out quite as bad as Clark predicted.

After a security guard summoned Conrad he willingly gave The Democrat-Capital reporter a pass for the backstage. It entitled the reporter to move around on the stage during the performances just as long as he did not interfere with any of the musicians while they played. He was allowed to ask questions of anyone, with the exception of Miss Colter and Jennings.

"Why do Miss Colter and Jennings have these censorship requirements?" the reporter asked Conrad.

"I believe censorship is a little strong," Conrad reasoned. The term "editorial privilege" would better explain their immunity, he explained. It does not allow them to go back later and say, "I did not say that," Conrad explained. They just want to make sure incorrect facts and misquotes are not printed, he continued.

And while the reporter continued questioning Conrad, the paper's photographer was barred on orders from Clark from bringing his camera into the stage area. A Fair official had said Jennings would "walk off the stage if his photograph was taken."

However, he did not walk off when many fans snapped their camera bulbs in front of the stage. By now the musicians who play with Miss Colter and Jennings were warming up the audience and Conrad had moved off to take pictures of the crowd.

Then Miss Colter emerged such favorites as "Good Hearted Woman," "Lukensbach Texas" and ended with an encore crowd pleaser, "You Picked a Fine Time To Leave Me Lucille."

While Jennings was blasting out his songs to the fans out in front, the 30 or so people who travel with him were sipping beers and moving a little to the beat of his songs backstage.

Clark ushered a few VIPs backstage who looked out of place in comparison to the Jennings group clad in blue jeans and black T-shirts with "Waylon" stenciled on the front.

Several of the Fair's VIPs were state legislators. Several had brought along their wives and at least one mother pulled her teenage daughter up to Jennings after the show. The girl blushed as her mother pushed her over to say "hi" to Jennings.

Immediately after the show, Jennings' bodyguards ushered him back to the bus.

Then he did an unusual thing, according to an aide. He came back on the stage and chatted with the people there.

"I've finished playing, but I'm just not tired yet," he replied to some friends.

A Democrat-Capital reporter identified himself and asked Jennings about his performance. But the minute he heard the word reporter, his smile went away and he walked off just saying, "The crowd was great."

A few minutes later as he headed for the bus once again the reporter asked if he would answer a few questions. "I'm sorry, I don't give interviews anymore. I just, I better not say anymore," he concluded.

As people began to file out of the backstage area, state troopers, Jennings' personal bodyguards and the high wire fences surrounded his bus.

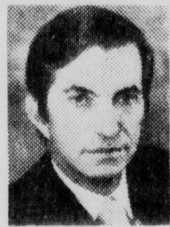

There seemed to be some irony there. He was undoubtedly the richest man who walked into the area that night, but the one with the least freedom.

One walked away with mixed reactions from the evening. Was the man's cold shoulder for reporters, awards and his reclusion just just an image projected to sell more records? Or was there no opaqueness to the man and he was an outlaw star who does what he wants, not what the public wants him to do?

And as one young man from Illinois asked the reporter later "Could I have your Waylon pass? You see I wrecked my car and it's a terrible night, except for Waylon, of course. I just want something to show people I was here."

It was a happening.

'Sea salt' no substitute

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have recently recovered from a mild heart attack and, of course, have to reduce my salt intake considerably. We wish to inquire if you could possibly recommend a salt substitute. We have heard that "sea salt" as sold in health food stores is suitable.

Our family doctor seems evasive on this subject.

Dear Reader — It depends on how severe your salt restriction must be. Many people who have had heart attacks and do not have high blood pressure or accumulation of fluid are able to eat a normal amount of salt with no problems at all.

Remember your body is designed to eliminate excess salt intake when it functions properly. Of course, if you have heart failure, liver problems, kidney failure or other causes for retaining fluid then you need to restrict salt.

The purpose of restricting salt is to eliminate sodium from the body. As the body retains excess sodium it also retains excess fluid. If you have to avoid sodium you must be careful not to use a salt substitute that contains sodium.

Sea salt is not a salt substitute at all and contains

Three to stay on board at Mo. Southern JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — Three persons now serving on the board of regents for Missouri Southern State College at Joplin will remain on the board to be named by Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale, sources in Joplin have confirmed.

The holdovers will be Fred Hughes, head of the present board and president of the Joplin Globe Publishing Co.; Jerry E. Wells, a Joplin lawyer, and Carolyn Dale McKee, whose family formerly published the Carthage Press.

The new appointees will be William Schwag Jr., of Joplin, department store president and principal owner of the large North Park Mall shopping center; Ray W. Grace, a Carthage businessman, and Don Roderique, an insurance agent and former member of the Missouri House of Representatives.

The governor's nominations are subject to confirmation by the Missouri Senate.

Missouri Southern evolved from a junior college to a fully financed and controlled state college on July 1.

just as much sodium as ordinary table salt. I cannot recommend it for any salt restricted diet. In fact, it has little or nothing to recommend it over table salt for any reason.

If you just want to cut down on your sodium you might be able to use Morton's Lite salt. It contains about half as much sodium as ordinary table salt. For more stringent sodium restriction you need to use a real salt substitute such as Morton's salt substitute or other substitute products usually found with dietetic foods in grocery stores. Look at the label and if the product contains sodium you don't want to use it for a salt substitute. The real salt substitutes do not contain sodium and usually use potassium and other salts to provide a salty taste.

There's more to what you should do after a heart attack than just limiting salt if you need to. To help you I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-12, After The Heart Attack. Other readers who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for mailing.

Dear Dr. Lamb — My problem is my baggy eyes. I have been told that these bags under the eyes are caused from lack of sleep. I would like to know if this is the only cause for it. I have had it for four years now and I'm beginning to think that it will never go away. Is it possible to get rid of it? How?

Dear Reader — Lack of sleep is not a cause for "bags under the eyes," nor is dissipation.

The cause depends on what you mean by bags under the eyes. If fluid accumulates around the eye in the loose skin it is more often associated with lying down. Swelling occurs in dependent parts of the body. That is why people develop swelling of the feet and ankles. At night the head is at the same level as the heart and swelling of the face occurs. Look around you and you will notice people tend to have more swelling around the eyes — "puffiness" — in the morning than in the evening.

A more common cause of "bags under the eyes" is a gradual enlargement of the normal fat pad just under the lower eyelid. These become more prominent as a person gets older. This can be surgically removed. This works when that is the problem. (NEA)

South Africa's divide and conquer ploy

WASHINGTON — The oldest trick of the era of Western colonialism in Asia and Africa, and of Jim Crow in the American South, was to "divide and rule."

Rowan

You gave a smattering of power to an Indian here, a dribble of money to a Nigerian there, tossed a trifling "special privilege" to a Mississippi Negro here — and you expected them to keep the natives from getting restless.

With their customary backwardness, the Afrikaners of South Africa, in their growing desperation, have finally discovered the game of divide and rule.

Prime Minister John Vorster has come up with a scheme under which South African whites will share "some political power" with the country's 2 million coloreds (persons of mixed race) and its 700,000 Asians. The country's 16 million blacks would be left outside — with no vote, no political participation of any kind.

Die Transvaler, the newspaper of Vorster's own National party, asks: "If we can devise a plan to ease relations with coloreds and Indians, why not also for urban blacks?"

The editors of Die Transvaler probably know as well as I that Vorster and other party leaders have worked fanatically for years to convince coloreds and Asians that they must fear the blacks, that they will be persecuted as much as whites if the black majority gains power, so they ought to play stooges to the whites.

Vorster has had the gall to feed this line to coloreds and Asians even as his regime was treating coloreds and Asians like dirt, tearing down their homes in Cape Town to give the land to whites, relegating them to racial ghettos, denying them any political expression, locking them up on the slightest pretense, shipping the ones who protested openly off to the South African versions of Siberia.

But in recent years, with the black revolt growing and the outside world showing greater hostility toward the Vorster regime, more and more coloreds and Asians have joined forces with the blacks.

So now, groping in fear, whites who only recently swore they would never share political power have come up with a transparent scheme in which they say:

"You coloreds and Asians are better than the blacks; to prove that we believe this, we are going to give you a political voice."

What a feeble, insulting voice it is! Under Vorster's plan, the coloreds, Indians and whites would have separate parliaments, separate cabinets, a separate prime minister. Each parliament would pass measures affecting only its group — an incredible racial partitioning of the law. However, there would be an 11-member "supercabinet council" of six whites, three coloreds and two Indians. This would be the ultimate executive authority.

Some long-time critics of the Vorster regime welcome this as "a breakthrough." One, Helen Suzman, calls it an illusion because "it gives the impression of real change from minority control based on race."

Yet, some coloreds and Asians who have had absolutely no voice in the political system will probably accept Vorster's overtures. They will rationalize that once the Afrikaners see that they are no threat, steps will be taken to give the nation's 16 million blacks a place in the system.

Coloreds and Asians must know, though, that blacks will see this move for what it is: an effort to give coloreds and Asians a piddling, insulting bribe to help hold down the black majority. And that will only intensify black anger and speed the pace of revolution.

I hope colored and Asian leaders see this Vorster gambit for what it is and understand the ultimate danger to them of going along with this outmoded "divide and rule" ploy.

In Washington Teamster rebel is a fighter

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — This city has more than its share of professional reformers, most of them idealistic college graduates who purposely shunned a "traditional" career in favor of promoting a cause. But Paul Poulos is different.

When his fellow reformers were going to graduate school in the 1960s, Poulos was driving trucks in his native New York City. When others were organizing public interest law firms in the early 1970s, Poulos was hauling freight in southern Florida.

"I've been involved in trucking, in one fashion or another for the last 18 years," says the soft-spoken, 39-year-old Poulos, who also has been a member of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters for virtually his entire adult life.

It was after he moved from New York to Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. that Poulos became outraged over substandard working conditions in the trucking industry and the failure of his union to aggressively pursue its members' rights.

"The abuses were much worse in Florida than in New York," recalls Poulos. When he insisted upon compliance with safety regulations and refused to drive unsafe trucks, he was dismissed by his employer for failure to follow instructions.

Poulos then began a full-scale campaign against what he calls "barbaric" working conditions — drivers required to take defective rigs on the road, meet delivery schedules which weren't modified when the speed limit was cut from 65 to 55 miles per hour, then turn the trucks around for other grueling runs without adequate rest or sleep.

As a result, Poulos was "blackballed" from working at virtually every freight terminal in South Florida. When he sought reinstatement, the Teamsters offered little help. "The union in no meaningful way handled my grievance," he recalls.

In early 1975, Poulos contacted PROD, a Washington organization formed following a 1971 conference of over-the-road truck drivers and dedicated to the twin goals of improving working conditions in the industry and bringing democracy to the union.

Poulos has just moved to Washington to join PROD as a full-time field organizer. His arrival comes at a time when the insurgent organization has started to build a record of major accomplishments.

In recent years, PROD won a $36,000 award for a Cleveland driver who opposed the union on the issue of driving overloaded rigs and a $40,000 back pay award for a Winston-Salem, N.C. driver who refused to drive an abnormally dangerous rig.

It secured $3.5 million in strike benefits unlawfully withheld from Teamster members and successfully petitioned federal regulatory agencies for improvements in truck noise limitations, tire standards and maintenance regulations.

Disenchanted Teamster members have, in the past, organized isolated rank-and-file reform efforts in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and elsewhere — but never before has an insurgent group had both a full-time staff and national base.

PROD's dues-paying ($20 per year) members now number about 4,000, a minuscule number compared with the almost 2 million men and women who belong to the Teamsters, the nation's biggest union.

But PROD already has made its mark. At the Teamsters mid-1976 convention in Las Vegas, union President Frank E. Fitzsimmons became so irked by the rebels' needling that he blurted out a blunt rejoinder:

"For those who would say that it's time to reform this organization, that it is time that the officers quit selling out the membership of their union, I say to them: Go to hell."

PROD is going no such place. Instead, it's going into the big cities — Chicago, St. Louis and Atlanta — and into the smaller communities of the nation's heartland — Effingham, Ill., Cape Girardeau, Mo. and Ft. Wayne, Ind. — to organize and seek new members. Fitzsimmons and the Teamsters have not heard the last of Poulos and PROD.

Money drops down the federal rathole

Some of the more routine stories out of Washington these days are those reporting how the taxpayers' money is being squandered.

Take the food stamp program. Agriculture Department auditors reported the other day that about $597 million is being lost yearly in the food stamp program because of sloppy administration.

We repeat, $597 million.

Most of this was due to families receiving more food stamps than they were entitled to get. And families that were not eligible for any food stamps at all got $222.8 million worth.

To put this in some sort of perspective, the U.S. Postal Service is considering dropping Saturday mail deliveries so it could save $400,000 and perhaps not have to raise postage rates so often. Better to stem the money flood in food stamps, then maybe we could have Sunday mail delivery.

The loosely-run welfare system seems especially prone to this sort of thing. Last month the Department of Health, Education and Welfare reported that nearly one out of every four families receiving aid to families with dependent children payments were ineligible or improperly paid. Cost to the taxpayers: $423 million a year.

If any financial officer in private business maintained an error rate a fraction of what seems to be commonplace at USDA and HEW, he would be fired on the spot. Yet in federal service such pocket change apparently can disappear with barely a shrug.

The American people are basically a generous lot, and are prepared to help out those who are in genuine need and incapable of helping themselves. But they do not have an infinite capacity for being ripped off, thanks to irresponsible bureaucrats who apparently couldn't care less.

WASHINGTON — A congressional inquiry into the lobbying practices of the nation's biggest corporations is being sabotaged by one of the congressmen who is supposed to be conducting the investigation.

The culprit is fast-talking, chain-smoking Rep. Garry Brown, R-Mich., whose heart belongs to the titans of commerce. He has faithfully championed their interests in the chambers of Congress. They have reciprocated at election time by contributing generously to his campaigns.

Last year, for example, he collected offerings from the executives of 18 major corporations, including Bendix, General Foods, General Motors, Georgia Pacific, Sun Company, Texaco, Texas Eastern and Upjohn.

All 18 have just received congressional questionnaires that they would rather not answer. The questionnaires, distributed by the House Commerce, Consumer and Monetary Affairs subcommittee, seek details about their lobbying activities.

Before the corporations could respond, Brown heaved a well-aimed monkey wrench into the investigative machinery. He fired off a letter to Chairman Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., notifying him: "I am advising those who contact my office ... that the mailing of the questionnaire is not pursuant to action taken by the subcommittee."

He contended, therefore, that the corporations "should not presume that a response is being solicited pursuant to action of the subcommittee."

Then he slipped copies of the letter to several corporations that were looking for an excuse to ignore the questionnaire. Already, the subcommittee has been served notice by some corporations that they won't respond to the questionnaire until the internal dispute is resolved.

Merry-go-round

Attempt to sidetrack a probe of lobbying

Brown complained that Rosenthal had mailed the questionnaires without consulting him. He is the subcommittee's ranking Republican.

In fact, the lobbying investigation was discussed in at least two monthly reports that were distributed to all the subcommittee members. Brown's staff representative on the subcommittee, Henry Ruempler, also was fully aware of the lobbying investigation. But Ruempler told our associate, Cary Cohn, that he had not been informed about the questionnaires.

Under the rules of the House, chairmen are supposed to direct the daily operations of their subcommittees. Brown's action, therefore, appears to be an attempt to obstruct the investigation. This is denied by Ruempler who said his boss wasn't trying to kill any legitimate investigation.

Brown told us Rosenthal should have discussed the questionnaires with all members of the subcommittee. His contributions from corporation executives, he insisted, had "absolutely not" affected his decision to challenge Rosenthal.

The stakes, meanwhile, are high. Corporations now spend hundreds of millions of dollars on grass roots lobbying to influence government decisions. The subcommittee wants to know whether these lobbying expenses have been deducted illegally from their taxes.

Footnote: Brown demonstrated his skill at tossing monkey wrenches in 1972. He played a leading role in squashing a proposed Watergate investigation by the late Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex. If this investigation had gone ahead, it might have exposed the Watergate scandal before the 1972 elections.

BACKSTAGE BROUHAHA: Scholarly, bespectacled Rep. Mike McCormack, D-Wash., won't let his colleagues forget that he is a scientist, with sufficient credentials to claim membership in the American Nuclear Society and American Association for the Advancement of Science.

But he reminded his colleagues of his scientific superiority once too often. It happened at the scene of his previous scientific endeavors, the Hanford nuclear works, where he labored as a research scientist from 1950 to 1970.

He returned as a congressman when a House subcommittee recently held on-site hearings. The dreary, droning testimony was technical, with experts testifying that nuclear wastes might accidentally seep into the nearby Columbia River.

Chairman Leo Ryan, D-Calif., noted that there was disagreement among scientists.

"Not among professionals, Mr. Chairman," snorted McCormack.

Annoyed, Ryan shot back: "Well, perhaps us amateurs have to drink the water later that we're concerned about."

"I think it's up to the amateurs," responded McCormack condescendingly, "to understand what the professionals are saying before they try to make them choose up sides against each other."

This got Ryan's Irish up. He remarked that the "experts" in charge of Idaho's ill-fated Teton Dam had told his subcommittee that they would do nothing differently if they had to rebuild the dam. Yet the dam collapsed last year, washing away a half-billion-dollars worth of property.

Such professionals, he suggested sarcastically, don't always know everything.

This was the end of the colloquy as it appeared in the unpublished transcript. But McCormack got in the last word. He told us Ryan had gone to Hanford with "preconceived notions" to create a "sensational story."

Growers should not be concerned about the holes in soybean leaves, but should evaluate the field on the basis of percentage of entire leaf area destroyed. In general soybeans that are in the stage of development where flowering and pod set is occurring can stand to lose from 25 to 35 per cent of the leaf area before this loss is reflected in lowered yields. Seldom do the foliage feeders, such as green cloverworms, cabbage or soybean loopers, and bean leaf beetles become numerous enough to cause this amount of foliage loss.

Those insects which feed upon pods and beans within pods are or should be of direct concern to the soybean grower. Corn earworms and fall armyworms do cause this type of damage, particularly when the larvae are the larger instars. However, if one is to achieve appreciable control with insecticides, the materials will have to be applied before the worms reach the point in their development where pod damage would occur. Base the need for control upon the average number of corn earworm larvae and fall armyworm larvae per foot of row. When this average reaches or exceeds one-half grown or small larvae per foot of row, controls would then be justified.

Off-type heads

A few farmers have reported observing Johnsongrass-type plants growing in their milo fields. On closer observation it is not a Johnsongrass head, but when the plant is pulled up there are rhizome roots. Bill Hampy advises that some of these plants have survived our winters in the past. Many of the seed companies have claimed that our winters will kill these rhizomes. It is our advice that this type plant be removed and the soil sterilized.

Field losses

Soybean field losses can be checked by making a light frame one foot square. Place the frame on the ground behind the combine. In numerous places over the field count all beans, including beans still in pods on stubble and divide by four. This is the approximate bushel per acre left in the field, when you divide the average number of beans per square foot by four.

To check field losses of corn if it is combined, count the kernels per square foot behind the combine. You are losing one bushel per acre for each 1½ kernels of shelled corn per square foot. Each ear of corn found in 133 feet of 40-inch row equals one bushel loss per acre.

Check your plant population in corn by counting the stalks in 13 feet of single 40-inch row in several locations.

Fencing costs

During the past five years the material cost for fencing has doubled. The present cost of constructing 80 rods of fence, for four barbed including posts, gives a material cost of $300 or more, for woven wire plus two barbed and all posts the cost for 80 rods is at least $500. The labor cost for 80 rods of four barbed fence would be $240 and about $275 for woven wire fence.

Herbicide residues

Herbicide applications made to corn, sorghum and soybeans must be reckoned with where winter wheat is being considered for fall planting on drought stricken fields. The guidelines that follow come from labels, product literature, research and experience. They have been established to protect the user and manufacturer and contain safety factors for average growing conditions. If you plan to sow wheat this fall throw some seed on the treated ground now and see if it will grow. Herbicides applied preplant, cultivated-in or moved into the soil by early rains will degrade less than normal. On the other hand herbicides applied on the soil surface late this spring and not moved into the soil by rain or tillage may have degraded more rapidly by breakdown by sunlight.

An application of 1½ lb. or more active ingredient of Atrazine or Attrex per acre is likely to affect wheat stands on most soil types in this season. Amiben has no residue problem.

Bladex normally disappears from the soil in 10 to 12 weeks. If used in combinations check comments for other products. Eradicane used alone, no residue problem. Lasso ordinarily no residue problem. Check comments of other products when used in combinations.

Any crop receiving Lorox can be planted after four months under normal conditions. If used in combination with Treflan note comments on label.

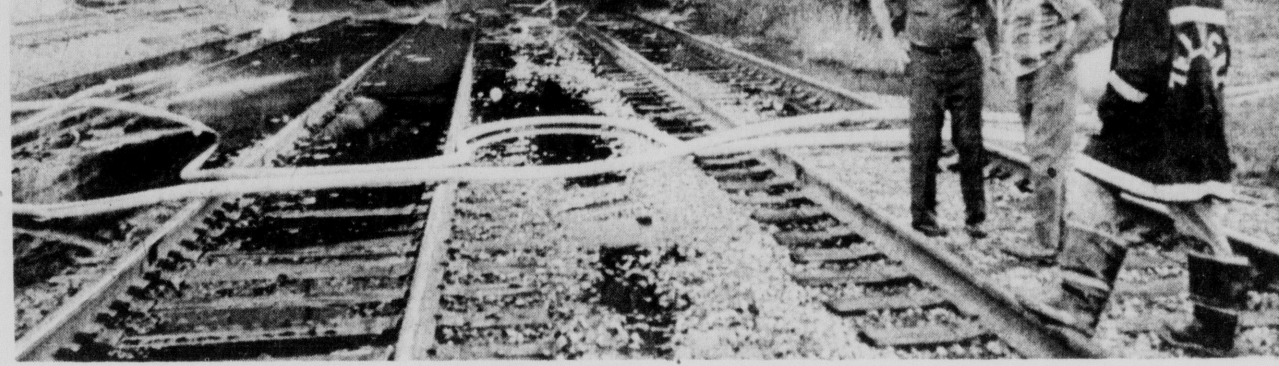

Ramrod in normal years has shown no residue problems. Where used in combination with atrazine or other herbicides check comments for those products.

Simazine or Princep injury can be expected. Don't plant winter wheat.

Sutan used alone has no residue problems. Check comments of other products when used in combinations.

The label on Treflan states that in the season following application plant only those crops for which Treflan has been registered as a preplant treatment or injury may result. There is also no residue problem with 2,4-D.

The Chinaberry tree, also known as China tree, pride of India and Indian lilac, is a member of the mahogany family native to Asia but now found throughout the southern United States.

Amtrak smash-up

An Amtrak engine lies upside down below an overpass after it collided with a Burlington Northern freight train late Saturday night near LaGrange, Ill. About a dozen freight cars were piled up by the collision over the Indiana Harbor Belt railroad but no passenger cars were derailed on the 192-passenger California bound train. A total of 24 passengers and eight Amtrak employees were treated in area hospitals for minor injuries and released.

Farm workers earned average of $2.77 hour

WASHINGTON (AP) — There aren't a lot of farm jobs in Alaska, but the pay is the best in the country.

The Agriculture Department says farm workers in Alaska earn an average of $4.86 an hour, compared with $3.50 in California — the highest in the continental United States. Hawaii is second in the country at $4.32 an hour.

On a national average, hired farm workers this summer made $2.77 an hour, up from $2.53 a year ago, according to a quarterly survey made by the USDA's Statistical Reporting Service.

The wage figures for Alaska were the first for the state, officials said. Only 830 paid farm workers were reported in Alaska, compared with 296,000 in California and 17,700 in Hawaii.

As devised by USDA, the wage rates involve different methods of payments such as piece work and jobs that include perquisites such as room and board. Allowances are made for those benefits in converting all wages to hourly rates.

The lowest wage rate paid to farm workers in the 48 contiguous states was $2.01 an hour this summer in West Virginia to 6,300 workers, according to the survey. That was down from an average of $2.18 a year ago.

But the commonwealth of Puerto Rico showed the lowest of all American possessions, averaging $1.69 an hour for 32,000 hired farm workers, up from $1.61 a year ago.

In all, there were 1,858,000 paid workers on U.S. farms when the survey was made the week of July 10-16, the report said. That was a decline from 2,063,400 workers a year ago. Cutbacks in acreages of some crops and changes in crops and livestock enterprises contributed to the decline. Drought also has been a factor in some major areas of the country.

Largest ever

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's rice stockpile on Aug. 1, the beginning of the crop's new marketing year, was the largest ever, according to the Agriculture Department.

Supplies of unmilled rough rice totaled 32.5 million hundredweight, up 4 per cent from 31.3 million a year ago. Milled rice, at 5.2 million hundredweight, was up 32 per cent from 3.9 million a year ago.

The rice stocks included holdings in the six major rice states: Arkansas, California, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri and Texas.

Earlier this month, USDA estimated 1977 rice production at 100.6 million hundredweight, down from 117 million last year. Exports and domestic use in 1977-78 are expected to require around 110 million hundredweight, meaning that the stockpile probably will be reduced a year from now.

Means business

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has told agencies under his control that President Carter means business about tightening up on the use of outside "consulting and expert services" by the federal government.

For many years, it has been a practice to hire outside experts on a consultant basis, many times at $100 a day or more, to make studies and perform other services.

"The proper use of consulting services by the federal government is of concern to this administration, and it is up to each one of you to see that it gets the proper attention in your own agency or staff office," Bergland told Agriculture Department agency heads in a memorandum.

FARMING IS EVERYBODY'S BREAD AND BUTTER!

The American farmer builds two things better than anyone else in the world. He builds the next generation, passing along a special kind of wisdom... respect for the soil, honesty, independence, and faith in the future. And he builds his land, leaving it better than he found it. That kind of building usually requires borrowed long-term capital. That's where we have helped for 60 years.

Grudge match?

Royals face New York

BALTIMORE (AP)—If there's any such thing as a grudge match during a 162-game baseball schedule, it comes up today for the Kansas City Royals.

That's when the Royals make a disputed return visit to Yankee Stadium, and they'd like nothing better than to polish off New York in the final meeting of the season between the American League's division leaders.

"We should be going home now and be off until Tuesday night," Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog said after Andy Hassler and Doug Bird combined to blank the Baltimore Orioles 5-0 Sunday. "Instead, we have to go to New York."

Herzog was still steaming about a game the Yanks postponed in New York on July 25, a move which set up tonight's game and led to a futile protest by the Royals.

"The game was called off at 4:30," Herzog recalled, "and when we left the park at 7 o'clock, it hadn't rained for two hours. Then we couldn't get a flight until 11 o'clock, and we got home the same time as we would have if we had played."

"The Yankees," Herzog said, "have no morals or integrity toward the game. They want to win, and to hell with everything else. And, they spend a lot of money trying to win."

"I have nothing against Billy Martin and the Yankee players," Herzog added, "but after the shenanigans pulled by the New York front office, I'd like to see Baltimore or Boston win the East."

The Kansas City manager claimed that in the 1976 playoffs won by the Yanks 3-2, New York had lights flashed on their scoreboard while the Royals were hitting and used walkie-talkies in the stands to relay stolen signals.

The Royals won the 11th time in 12 games Sunday, opening up a three-game lead in the West, as John Wathan hit a two-run homer in the fourth inning and then doubled just before a two-run single in the sixth by Fred Patek.

George Brett drove in the other run with a fifth inning single, which was his sixth hit in seven times at bat.

The Orioles, who lost for the sixth time in eight games, were held to five hits and advanced only three runners past first base.

Hassler, 7-5, allowed two hits in six innings before retiring with a swollen left leg caused by a liner off the bat of Rich Dauer in the first inning. Bird then made his 42nd appearance and picked up his eighth save.

Loser Ross Grimsley, 12-7, was lifted following Wathan's sixth inning double, and Patek greeted reliever Scott McGregor with his two run single through the drawn-in infield.

Herzog said he would have removed Hassler in the sixth had he not retired Singleton following a leadoff walk by Dauer. But he made the move at the end of the inning anyway, when the injury bothered Hassler.

Marty Pattin, who pitched more than eight innings as a starter on Wednesday, warmed up for Kansas City in the sixth, but Herzog switched to Bird to start the seventh.

"When you have a hot horse, you ought to bet on him," Herzog said of Bird, clearly Kansas City's bullpen ace now that Mark Littell is sidelined with an injured rib cage.

Herzog said despite the recent winning streak for the Royals, it was much too early to start making predictions of a division championship.

"We were seven ahead with 11 games to go last season, and it went down to the wire," he said of Kansas City's 2½-game winning margin in 1976.

Richmond man wins derby

Bill French, Richmond, topped a field of more than 80 drivers to win the feature in the demolition derby at the Missouri State Fair.

Freddie Dehn, Excelsior Springs, was second, and Frank Johns, Thompson, was third.

Kenneth Browning, Lee's Summit, was the winner of the first heat, followed by Gerald Lindsey, Smithville, and Dan Stith, Madison.

In the second heat, it was Rick Shaefer, Shelbina, first, Monte Wheeler, Bolivar, second, and French third.

The top three finishers in the third heat were Jimmie Enochs, Macon, Sonnie Atterbury, Fulton, and Bobby Blurtin, Nevada.

Dehn won the fourth heat, followed by Rick Atterbury, Fulton, and Johns.

Bill Glavin, Richmond, won the semi-feature.

Dodgers torture Cards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — While Los Angeles Dodgers first baseman Steve Garvey ended his long period of frustration Sunday, it was another day of agony for the St. Louis Cardinals in general and base-stealing king Lou Brock in particular.

Garvey thundered out of his two-month batting slump with two home runs, one a grand slam, and three doubles to lead the Dodgers to an 11-0 victory over the Cardinals behind Don Sutton's 47th career shutout, a six-hitter.

But for Brock, who arrived in Los Angeles needing just one stolen base to match Ty Cobb's career mark of 892 thefts, it was another fruitless afternoon.

Brock failed to reach base in three appearances and in his fourth time at the plate, in the eighth inning, his frustration reached such a point he was thrown out of the game by plate umpire Ed Montague.

"No, it was not frustration," Brock said afterward. "I really don't want to comment on it."

Brock reached base just one time in the three games against Los Angeles, via a walk in Friday night's game, but there was a runner ahead of him at the time.

Sutton, 12-8, said he could not remember a series in which the Dodgers dominated Brock so thoroughly.

Brock will attempt to set the record tonight in San Diego, while Los Angeles begins a three-game series with the Chicago Cubs this evening.

Reaching base is something Garvey was having trouble doing through what he termed "the most frustrating period of my career."

Since July 3, when his average peaked at .316, Garvey had batted only .211. Until his RBI Saturday night, which produced the winning run in a 4-3 Los Angeles victory, he had gone 25 days without driving in a run.

Sunday he drove home five runs and also scored five, an all-time Dodger record. Cookie Lavagetto, in 1939, had scored four runs for the Brooklyn Dodgers.

His 14 total bases were second only in Los Angeles Dodger history to Dave Lopes' 15, in 1974.

"It's nice to be back after my two week trip," said a relieved Garvey. "It looks like we're starting to roll again. We've played very well the last few days."

Garvey's grand slam was the highlight of a rousing seven-run, seventh inning

Rams fall 27-19

Chiefs like giant-killer role

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Coach Paul Wiggins, who's had to raise his hapless Kansas City Chiefs up from the mat over the past three years, admits he could get to like the role of giant-killer.

"David got another Goliath," a jubilant Wiggins said Saturday night after his club defeated the Los Angeles Rams 27-19 — the second victory over a 1976 playoff club in three outings.

The Chiefs surprised the Pittsburgh Steelers 23-21 two weeks ago, then bowed to Washington 13-7. They now stand 2-2 while Los Angeles dropped to 1-3.

"I'm not saying we're a contender or anything," Wiggins said, "but it shows that the attitude things we've been talking about were there. You can't tell me this isn't an emotional game, because it was there tonight."

The Rams were shackled by three interceptions and three fumbles — most at critical points.

"Chuck Knox is going to call them (the turnovers) mistakes," Wiggins accurately predicted. "I'm going to call it making things happen."

"You just can't turn the ball over five or six times and have all the penalties we had in the first half and win," Knox said in a game post-mortem.

"Defensively we could have played better, but you've got to give Kansas City credit, they're going to be a good ball team this year."

Knox said the one bright sign from the game was establishment of the Rams' running game. They moved for 231 yards on the ground, nearly a third of that via John Cappelletti, who punched out 70 yards in 14 carries to lead both clubs.

Broadway transplant Joe Namath moved the Rams freely during the first half, but fell victim to turnovers and penalties and could register only six points by intermission.

Kansas City, meanwhile, was rolling with 24-and 39-yard field goals by Jan Stenerud plus a nine-yard touchdown reverse by Larry Williams.

Tony Reed and Pat McNeil punched across fourth-quarter touchdown runs for the winners to offset a Pat Haden-Harold Jackson TD toss of 29 yards and a five-yard touchdown run by Wendell Tyler.

Rams defensive end Jack Youngblood attributed the Kansas City scoring to experimentation on the part of the visitors.

"We hardly played any of our old defenses that we've used in past seasons," he said. "I guarantee you that if we played the defenses we played in the playoffs, we would have shut them out."

Mike Livingston, who started at quarterback for the Chiefs but left with a groin injury, did some guaranteeing, too.

"Our running game is coming around, we're moving the ball," he said after the game. "We're going to be good, I guarantee it."

Livingston was spelled by backup Tony Adams in the third quarter. It was then that Adams had a painful reunion with off-season buddy Jack Youngblood. The two often go hunting off-season, but it was hunting of a different kind Saturday night as Youngblood chased Adams to the sidelines, slamming him to the artificial turf.

Adams hurt his left ankle and knee on the play and had to be helped off the field.

"He really felt bad about it," Adams said of Youngblood. "He kept saying, 'Be all right, be all right, please!'"

Adams was "all right" enough later to return and engineer two touchdown drives that provided the winning margin.

Lions look to be about .500 team

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
NEA Sportswriter
Prospectus

Tommy Hudspeth is not just an interim head coach now. He's also made some significant changes in his staff. Less significant have been changes in playing cast because Lions didn't have No. 1 choice in draft and will have to go with essentially same team that was 6-8 last year and dropped notch to third in Black-and-Blue Division. No buoyant feeling.

Tommy Hudspeth

Offense

Quarterback: Greg Landry's statistics were among most impressive of his nine-year career. Not as mobile as he used to be since knee surgery, but smarter. Joe Reed's in wings Rating—B-

Receiving: Much depends on J. D. Hill coming back from bad knee that caused him to miss last season. He'd team with Ray Jarvis out wide. The tight ends, vet Charley Sanders, youngster David Hill so good that they often used them both at same time. Rating—B

Running: Dexter Bussey emerged as heavy duty ball carrier, and Larry Gaines at fullback finished fast in rookie year. They're the main men. Mark down Rick Kane for future. Rating—B

Offensive Line: Those 67 sacks of Lion QB's make this area look vulnerable, but some attribute slump to coaching problems. Rockne Freitas at one tackle is the quality man. Lynn Boden, Russ Bolinger are young, aggressive guards. There's problem at center. Rating—C

Defense

Defensive Line: Three important men coming off knee surgery—Herb Orvis, Larry Hand, Doug English. They hold key to competent front four. Ken Sanders, Billy Howard fill out the hand. Some question where they'll play. Hand Orvis is the leader. Rating—B-

Linebackers: The same cast, with Paul Naumoff and Charlie Weaver on the outside, Jim Laslavic in middle. Weaver was top defender on team in '76. Laslavic bit of question mark because he had knee surgery after season. Ed O'Neil can step in. Rating—B

Secondary: There could be some reshuffling. Lem Barney, in deference to age, might move to free safety. James Hunter is tabbed for corner, with Levi Johnson. Also rookie Walt Williams. Dick Jauron, Charlie West are safety vets. Rating—B

Kicking, Special Teams: Neither toe really satisfied Lions last year. They've signed Bobby Wood of Michigan to compete with Benny Ricardo as placekicker. Herman Weaver stays on as punter by default. Soph Hunter, rookie Williams handle returns. Rating—C+

Prediction

This doesn't look like much more than .500 team unless the offense led by Landry catches fire. At least, he starts season definitely set as No. 1. Defense, always a Lion strength, looks like it could be vulnerable in couple of spots. Third in NFC Central.

Season finished for Detroit ace

DETROIT (AP) — "It's just one of those years in life," said Mark "The Bird" Fidrych, as he packed his gear for the trip home to Northboro, Mass.

The Detroit Tigers' pitcher was philosophical, but obviously disappointed that his baseball season was finished.

Jay Hatfield, grandson of Tigers coach Fred Hatfield, watched the 1976 American League Rookie of the Year cram two big boxes with kewpie dolls, stuffed "Big Bird" toys and various other gifts sent to Fidrych by adoring fans.

"Are you a star?" the little boy asked.

"Naw, I ain't no star," Fidrych said with a shrug.

He pointed to the sky and said, "The stars are up there."

Fidrych was told Sunday by Tigers General Manager Jim Campbell that he would not come off the disabled list before the season ended.

The Bird had not pitched since July 12 due to tendonitis in his right shoulder. Campbell, after conferring with Fidrych, Manager Ralph Houk and team physician Dr. Clarence Livingood, decided it would be better to give Fidrych complete rest than risk further injury by rushing his return.

Mark Fidrych

"I'll go and get my boat," Fidrych said. "I'll go and do something, man, just do something different."

What has it been like this year without the colorful, bubbly Fidrych pitching most of the time?

"You just miss one night a week of things going wild, that's all," said Detroit center fielder Mickey Stanley. "There was a celebration once a week. It was fun when he pitched. It was something we had that we just don't have any more."

Demolition derby

As his radiator steams, a driver is rammed by another car during the second heat of Sunday night's demolition derby at the Missouri State Fair. Rain forced cancellation of the afternoon sprint car program, but it didn't stop more than 80 drivers who turned out for the derby. A crowd of about 3,500 watched the event.

Reggie cools it, Yankees win

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

It has to be more than happenstance that the August pennant surge of the New York Yankees coincides with the "Cool it, man, don't rock the boat" posture adopted by the team's volatile Reggie Jackson.

The $2.9 million outfielder has been keeping his tongue harnessed and his big bat loose while providing cleanup impetus in the Yankees' streak of 18 victories in their last 21 games.

There's a story behind it.

"I felt like a guy who had been knocked unconscious. I was so numb I hardly knew where I was," Jackson said, reflecting on the early locker-room bickering that almost blew the Yankees out of American League East contention.

"My social life went to pieces. I told my girl friend she had to get out of town. My dad, Martinez, loves baseball, but I'll bet he hasn't seen more than three games all year. My mother had a heart condition and she refuses to listen or read about the games.

"They couldn't stand the abuse they thought I was taking from the fans and the press." Then shortly after the All-Star break in July, an incident occurred which brought Reggie back to near normalcy.

"I have this contract with Standard Brands," he explained while sitting in front of his locker in an almost deserted Yankees dressing room. "They're very nice people and the contract for me is better than the one I have with the Yankees."

"Well, after the All-Star game, Mr. Ross Johnson — he is chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Standard Brands — and Ron Capadocia — he's president of Curtis Candies, which is putting out my Reggie Bar — they came and talked to me.

"They said they were behind me 100 per cent, and Mr. Johnson said I can call on him any time and have use of his limousine and private jet. But they said that fueling these lockerroom feuds could only have a negative effect on my career. They suggested that I swallow my anger and concentrate on playing ball."

"That's what I did." In the last three weeks, the 31-year-old slugger has been the hottest clutch hitter on the team, hitting better than .300 and knocking in more than 30 runs. He has had 16 game-winning runs batted in, the best on the team.

Still, such an inspirational performance has failed to thaw the icy barrier separating him from all but a handful of his teammates. In the snobbish Yankees clubhouse, they continue to regard him as an interloper, of whom one unnamed player said, "The guys can tolerate him, but never be friendly with him."

It is a regrettable state of affairs, but Jackson says graciously, "Things are a bit better now."

When he was a member of the Oakland A's, a team that won five AL championships and three World Series, he was a free-speaking, free-swinging spirit. He was the catalyst, always the center of attention, adored by fans, sought by newsmen.

But the cards were stacked against him when he chose to wear the sacred Yankees' pinstripes. Old Yankees resented the fact that he was personally courted and signed by owner George Steinbrenner, and they were envious of his five-year, $2.9 million contract. They didn't like it when newsmen started flocking around his locker.

Manager Billy Martin, a stormy petrel who throughout his career had been the center of attention, himself must have felt threatened, provoking a personality clash, ugly scenes and even a near skirmish in the dugout.

Martin reluctantly moved Jackson into the cleanup spot in the batting order — his ideal position — only after arm-twisting by Steinbrenner.

"When I came to New York, I thought I was coming to a precarious, fun-loving, exciting and understanding place," Jackson said. "I never realized that I would get caught in this tug of war with the press."

Texas shut out on two-hitter

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

It was Ron Guidry's 27th birthday and he could only think of three better presents to give himself.

"The only things I can think of besides this are a one-hitter, a no-hitter and a perfect game," Guidry said after tossing a two-hitter Sunday, leading the New York Yankees to a 1-0 victory over the Texas Rangers.

The left-hander gave up a two-out triple to Jim Sundberg in the first inning and a leadoff single to Bert Campaneris in the seventh.

Still, it wasn't easy as Rangers pitcher Dock Ellis was almost as stingy.

The Yankees got eight hits off Ellis and needed a little luck to get their run.

Graig Nettles hammered a long drive in the New York sixth inning which right fielder Tom Grube appeared to be ready to catch near the fence in right center. However, center fielder Juan Beniquez cut in front of Grube and the ball caromed off Beniquez' glove as he tried for a leaping catch.

One out later, Ellis, 7-11, fell behind 3-0 on Reggie Jackson. Jackson swung at the next pitch and dumped a bloop single into center field, scoring Nettles.

In other AL games Sunday, the Detroit outslugger the California Angels 12-9, the Oakland A's defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 6-2, the Cleveland Indians downed the Seattle Mariners 10-6, the Kansas City Royals blanked the Baltimore Orioles 5-0, the Boston Red Sox edged the Minnesota Twins 6-5 and the Milwaukee Brewers clobbered the Chicago White Sox 10-1.

By posting their 18th victory in their last 21 games, the Yankees remained two games ahead of second-place Boston in the AL East race and opened a four-game lead over Baltimore.

Tigers 12, Angels 9

A throwing error in the sixth inning by Bobby Bonds negated his two-homer performance and helped Detroit down California. Bonds' error allowed the winning run to score, snapping a 9-8 tie.

Jason Thompson slammed his 26th homer of the season in the eighth for the Tigers and Detroit scored five runs in the fifth inning as California pitcher Mike Barlow walked four batters.

Red Sox 6, Twins 5

Carl Yastrzemski singled in the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and relievers Mike Paxton and Bill Campbell held Minnesota at bay as Boston nipped the Twins.

Paxton allowed just one hit from the fifth inning until the ninth when Minnesota threatened with two hits. Campbell then took over and retired Rod Carew and Lyman Bostock, ending the game.

Brewers 10, White Sox 1

A tremendous home run by Sal Bando capped Milwaukee's four-run first inning as the Brewers routed Chicago. Don Money drove in three Milwaukee runs with a homer and a single.

Bando's 16th homer of the season, aided by a 23-mile-per-hour wind, landed on the upper deck roof in left field as he became the 19th player in the 67-year history of Comiskey Park to hit the ball out of the big stadium.

Lary Sorensen, 5-7, had a two-hit shutout until Eric Soderholm led off the Chicago sixth with his 21st homer.

Irwin fires best score of year to win Hall of Fame tournament

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Leonard Thompson was bewildered.

He'd just played the back nine in a course-record 29. He had a round of 66 and, on the feared No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club — one of the nation's most demanding layouts — had finished 72 holes a dizzying 15 strokes under par.

"What do you have to do to win around here?" Thompson inquired after finishing a distant second to Hale Irwin, who was 20 under.

Irwin, who had to win to prove a personal point — "there was no alternative," he said — compiled rounds of 65, 62, 69 and 68 into a 264 total, the best score of the year on the pro tour, and won by five strokes over Thompson in the Hall of Fame Golf Classic Sunday.

"The score, on this golf course, is amazing," Irwin said. "It is not amazing that I won. I had to win. Any win is nice. This is particularly so."

It may have been the sweetest of his nine career triumphs, most of which have come over the most difficult courses America can offer. The authoritative manner in which he subdued famed old No. 2 made it one of his most artistic.

More importantly, to Irwin, at least, it proved a point.

It got him back in the World Series of Golf, to be played this weekend at Akron, Ohio.

"I'd been shuffled off, told I wasn't good enough," Irwin said. "There've been two World Series (under the new, expanded format) and I've had to qualify three times."

And he didn't like it at all. The whole matter, he said, "was not handled properly.... It was not fair."

When Irwin won the Atlanta Classic May 29 he was told he'd qualified for the World Series off a point list. He made his plans accordingly, taking some time off, turning down some financial offers to play in the World Series.

Six weeks later, he was told there had been an error in compiling the points. He wasn't in. He was out.

Irwin won $50,000 from the total purse of $250,000 and pushed his winnings for the year to $156,456.

Tampa Bay loses more than just a ball game

By DAVE KAYE
AP Sports Writer

After last year's 0-14 season, Tampa Bay Buccaneers Coach John McKay probably figured that things couldn't get much worse.

He may have been wrong. The second-year National Football League Bucs started the preseason with six quarterbacks. Following Saturday's game, they are down to two.

Steve Spurrier quarterbacked the Bucs through their inaugural season last year but left the team in a dispute with McKay over the right to call plays.

That left Mike Boryla in charge, but he was injured in last week's 10-7 victory over Green Bay and will be out for the entire season.

McKay had counted on Gary Huff to help improve Tampa Bay's record, but that hope ended Sunday in the Buccaneers' 30-21 "fall-from-ahead" loss to the Atlanta Falcons.

Huff completed 15 of 23 passes for a club-record 237 yards and three touchdowns and had the Bucs leading 21-20 early in the fourth quarter. But he was tackled after releasing a pass and severely injured his left knee.

Doctors expect him to be out of action for four to six weeks. Substitute quarterback Parnell Dickinson failed to complete a pass in five attempts and had two intercepted as the Bucs folded in the final quarter.

"This is the most serious blow we've suffered since I've been here," McKay said. "I would say there's a 50-50 chance of the Bucs bringing a new quarterback into camp."

In addition to Dickinson, the only other quarterback in camp is rookie Randy Hedbergh, from Minot, S.D. State.

"Iron Man" Joe McGinnity pitched to Iron batters also. In 1900 he hit 41 of them for a National League record.

Navratilova wins

after slow start

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) —

Martina Navratilova may have opened with a slow start, but she unleashed devastating power over Mima Jausovec to record a 3-6, 6-2, 6-1 triumph and win the Women's Tennis Classic Sunday.

Lary Sorensen, 5-7, had a two-hit shutout until Eric Soderholm led off the Chicago sixth with his 21st homer.

Irwin won $50,000 from the total purse of $250,000 and pushed his winnings for the year to $156,456.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Jim: "How about some articles on experts at their best and worst, with maybe a little emphasis on their mistakes." Oswald: "I have a jim dandy for you. It is taken from the finals of the life master pairs of 1940. I sat North and my partner was one of the great players. He became declarer at six spades. West thought a long while and finally led the queen of clubs. As you can see, that lead gave him his contract on a silver platter. Yet, he refused to finesse against the jack of clubs, tried the heart finesse instead and went down one."

Jim: "Down one would not be a bottom. I assume most pairs were in six notrump or six spades. Without that queen of clubs lead or a heart lead against notrump by North, they all were down one."

Oswald: "That is just why my partner did not make the hand. He had noted West's long study before leading that queen of clubs and decided that it might well have been from queen-small. He also saw that after the spade finesse lost he would have lots of company at one down, if the heart queen was in the wrong place also. So down the expert went."

ASK THE JACOBYs

A Nebraska reader asks if the Stayman convention was invented in England in the early '30s.

We have seen no evidence to this effect. It is purely an American invention although numerous people other than Sam Stayman have claimed it. It is a mighty good convention.

Ann Landers

Don't drop out to bum around

Dear Ann Landers: You'll never print this because it doesn't happen to fit in with your philosophy, but I hope you'll get some word to that 15-year-old. It just might help him. He signed himself, "Wasting The School's Money."

I am 19 and female. Two years ago I decided I, too, was wasting the school's money as well as my time. So I quit. Today I own a new car and have a very promising job as a secretary.

I'd like to tell all the kids out there who feel as I did, DON'T quit school just to bum around — even that gets to be a drag after a while. Get a job and start to make a future for yourself. You are the only one who can do it. — Succeeding In Connecticut

Dear Conn: You didn't say anything about secretarial school. Did you go or are you self taught? Unless a student is willing to go to trade school or take additional training in a special field, I say it is best to stay in high school and get that diploma.

Dear Ann Landers: I asked you to rerun one of my favorite columns last year and you did it. I hate to impose on you again so soon but I ran across another column I would love to see reprinted. I found it in my brother's wallet. He was accidentally drowned ten days ago. The column was dated Nov. 23, 1969. My brother was 26 years old when he died and had been your reader since his teens.

Please, Ann, it would mean a lot to me. — Bob's Brother
Dear Friend: Please accept my deep sympathy for your loss. Here is the column:
Dear Ann Landers: The other day I ran across a very old clipping. It was timeworn and in small print. I found a magnifying glass and read it. It is one of the loveliest expressions of humanity I have ever seen. I hope you will consider it worthy of your column. (P.S. It gave no hint of the author.)

On This Day — Mend a quarrel, Search out a forgotten friend,

Dismiss a suspicion and replace it with trust, Write a letter to someone who misses you, Encourage a youth who has lost faith,

Keep a promise, Forget an old grudge, Examine your demands on others and vow to reduce them.

Fight for a principle, Express your gratitude, Overcome an old fear, Take two minutes to appreciate the beauty of nature, Tell someone you love him. Tell him again, And again, And again.

— Oregon Friend
CONFIDENTIAL to Miss Fourteen in Upstate: You sound too "popular" for your own good. Doesn't all that traffic wear out the rugs in your house? Where's your mother anyway?

Discover how to be date bait without falling hook, line and sinker. Ann Landers' booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," will help you be more poised and sure of yourself on dates. Send 50 cents in coin along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

ZOONIES

Make plans for your new pupil

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The start of school is approaching and parents with youngsters about to attend class for the first time should start now to make sure that the big event goes smoothly.

The Office of Child Development of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has a guide for parents, prepared by Luleen S. Anderson, coordinator of psychological services and elementary guidance for the Quincy, Mass., public schools. The pamphlet, "When a Child Begins School," is available, at no charge, from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 635E, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Here, meanwhile, are some suggested dos and don'ts: —Don't make the beginning of school a topic of daily conversation. Treat going to school as something that happens in the normal course of events — something that is expected and natural.

—Don't allow older children to frighten or tease the younger ones with horror stories about school. Talk to older children and make them partners in the effort to help younger brothers and sisters adapt easily and without fear.

—Do answer all questions honestly. You can help ease a child's uncertainty by telling him how long the school year lasts, how many hours he will be away from home each day and how he will get to and from class. If you try to reassure the child by lying — telling him it won't last very long, for example — he will only be more upset when he learns the truth.

—If both parents will be working, arrange for before and after school care and make sure the child knows exactly what the setup is. Again, knowing the details of what's ahead makes a child feel more secure.

—Do see if your school system runs orientation sessions for parents and first-time pupils to familiarize the youngsters with staff members and physical facilities.

—Don't give the impression that the child has a choice about going to school. If your youngster announces, "They can't make me go to school," respond calmly, but firmly.

Polly's pointers

White vinegar removes creases

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns recipes one sees in the paper or a magazine. Often one will find a recipe that sounds just scrumptious and then discover that it does not say what size pan to use. Sometimes it will say a large pan but what is a large pan? I have three sizes that I consider large.

Another that sends me into an orbit is for a topping that says mix one cup cake mix, one-fourth cup sugar, cinnamon and one-fourth cup margarine and sprinkle on the top. Now you try mixing that all together and you will find you have a dough. I would like for someone to tell me how to sprinkle a dough. — B.L.

DEAR POLLY — If you have a jacket with a hood that is tightened with a cord take a few stitches and tack the cord to the back of the casing it runs through so it will never pull out. — K.U.

DEAR READERS — This would be especially good for the children's jackets that so often have hoods. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pointer concerns our most precious commodity — our children. I am so grateful for advice a dear aunt gave me many years ago which has done away with a lot of petty nagging and scolding and made our home a happier place. A spilled glass of milk, muddy shoes on a newly waxed floor, etc. etc. can be annoying to say the least but they are forgotten in a few days, a week or a month. Use this as a guide line — if it will be inconsequential in a week or month do not blow your cool over it but just hand the offenders a sponge or cloth and help them clean it up. Getting up an hour earlier than usual does a lot for the peace of mind. Get the house tidy, the washing done and spend that extra time with the children. The years pass so quickly so love them and enjoy them and have no regrets. — MRS. L.J.C.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — How do you get creases out of clothes after lengthening them? I need to lengthen several pairs of pants for my son — some are double knit and some are permanent press. I know I have read this in the column but cannot remember what it was. — SHIRLEY.

DEAR SHIRLEY — Indeed you have read that Pointer in this column — and more than once. Each time I think must be the last but the mail always has so many requests for a repeat that I have come to the conclusion that everyone is lengthening hems. Please cut out the following and save it for future reference.

Wring a cotton cloth (I use a piece of an old sheet) out of a mixture of half and half WHITE vinegar and water and use that as a pressing cloth with a hot iron. I have even used full strength WHITE vinegar on stubborn lines but first always test on your particular fabric. — POLLY.

Polly will send you one of her signed thank-you newspaper coupon clippers if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.*

Try other seasonings on old favorites

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

Seasoning of favorite vegetable, poultry or meat dishes takes on new meaning when spices, herbs and blends are used instead of the basic salt-and-pepper routine.

Next time you want to enhance the flavor of chicken or seafood without drowning basic flavor subtleties try such items as black, white or red pepper, onion or garlic powder, curry or chili powder, allspice or ginger.

Herbs such as marjoram, basil, thyme, tarragon or blends such as an Italian seasoning go well in a batter for frying vegetables such as eggplant chunks, mushrooms, zucchini or brussels sprouts. These herbs also are good in such vegetables when they are steamed or baked.

Sliced or chunk fruit, especially dipped in a batter and deep fried, are very tasty when a little cinnamon, clove, nutmeg, mace, ginger, allspice or apple or pumpkin pie spice is used.

Since it is fun to try herbs and spices until you find those to your taste and that of your family, experiment with different ones to decide your favorites.

CURRIED OVEN-BAKED "FRIED" CHICKEN
1/2 cup dry bread crumbs
2 teaspoons curry powder
2 teaspoons onion powder
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
1/16 teaspoon ground red pepper
2 1/2 pound chicken, cut into eighths milk

Combine bread crumbs, curry powder, onion powder, salt, garlic powder and red pepper. Mix well. Dip chicken in milk and roll in crumb mixture. Place in buttered baking pan. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until chicken is done, 45 to 50 minutes. Makes four portions.

(NOTE: Crumb mixture may be used to coat fish fillets and also for deep-fat frying.)

HERBED BATTER FOR FRIED VEGETABLES
1 cup all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons Italian seasoning
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon onion powder
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
1/16 teaspoon ground red pepper

2 eggs, beaten
3/4 cup milk
1 tablespoon oil

In a large mixing bowl sift flour with Italian seasoning, baking powder, onion powder, salt, garlic powder and red pepper. Add eggs, milk and prepared vegetables such as eggplant, cut into one-half-inch sticks; cauliflowerettes, celery pieces into batter, drain. Deep or shallow fat fry in oil preheated to 375 degrees until golden, turning once. Makes sufficient batter to cover vegetables for 6 portions.

Meatloaf for slicing

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

MEATLOAF SANDWICHES

This meatloaf slices beautifully and it has spicy flavor.

1 pound ground chuck beef
1 pound spicy-hot bulk sausage
1/2 cup fine dry breadcrumbs
1 small onion, finely grated (pulp and juice)
1 garlic clove, crushed
2 eggs, unbeaten

1/4 cup buttermilk
Sliced bread, mayonnaise and lettuce

Thoroughly mix together all the ingredients except the bread, mayonnaise and lettuce. Rinse an 8 1/4 by 4 1/2 by 2 1/4-inch loaf pan with cold water; firmly pack meat mixture into pan. Loosen edges with a small spatula and turn out on a foil-lined shallow baking pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 1 hour; cool; turn out on a small platter; cover and chill. Slice before using with mayonnaise-spread bread and lettuce for sandwiches.

You can cut down on foam when you are cooking dry beans or peas by adding a tablespoon of fat (for each cup of the legumes) to the cooking water. This method is particularly helpful when a pressure cooker is used. Great Northern, red kidney and pinto beans all benefit from this method; however, it does not help to keep large limas from foaming.
